

NETWORK TECHNOLOGY PROGRAM

Network Technology is a program offered by the Information Technology Department in Faculty of Computers and Information, Cairo University.

Program Vision: "The network technology program at the Faculty of Computing and Information - Cairo University is the best source Locally and regionally for academic education and scientific research and applied in the field of computer networks".

Program Mission: "The Network Technology Program at the Faculty of Computing and Information - Cairo University is committed to providing good education and research To create highly competitive cadres of computer network professionals in addition to building Capacity and provide technical advice and solutions that contribute to the program in social and economic development. "

The program is 135 credit hours, divided as: 117 theoretical credit hours, 16 practical credit hours, and 2 training credit hours, which is distributed over 46 subjects over eight semesters.

THE FIRST NETWORK TECHNOLOGY IN CAIRO UNIVERSITY

5 AHMED ZEWAIL STREET, DOKKI
GIZA 12613
+202 356 74627
WWW.FCI-CU.EDU.EG

Cairo University

Faculty of Computers & Information

CAREER OPPORTUNITIES

A graduate of the program is a specialist in computer networks in addition to studying the security of networks and all the basic materials of computer science, which qualifies him to work in the following functions:

- Network engineer
- Network administrator
- IT manager
- System administrator
- Information Security Analyst.
- Systems Engineer (Computer Networking / IT)
- Network Security Engineer.
- Security Engineer.
- Cloud architect.
- Mobile Application developer.

Where the graduate can work:

- All government and private bodies.
- Telecom Companies (Telecom Egypt, Vodafone, Orange, Etisalat)
- Companies operating in the field of cloud computing.

FOR MORE INFORMATION

<http://www.fci-cu.edu.eg>

ENTRY REQUIREMENTS

Add entry requirements here

